Experience

Catherine joined the team in 2002, having a previous expertise in personal tax compliance and advisory areas, payroll, etc.

Having first advised on employment law in the firm, she now specializes in the implementation of group structuring projects, working in coordination with local and foreign tax and legal counsel. In this context, she has a particular experience in obtaining business licenses for companies to be able to operate in Luxembourg.

She also finds the context of the acquisition of companies in corporate law fascinating because a lawyer may have to manage the complex combination of the human will and the constraints of the business strategy, which can be quite challenging, in particular as regards the negotiation aspect.

Finally, Catherine also practices tax litigation before the Luxembourg Courts.

Due to her experience in various areas, she enjoys being involved in multidisciplinary files, for which her versatile profile is definitely an asset.
